

Employee's Guide to Remote Work

Tohono O'odham Nation

Why TON has implemented widespread remote work during COVID-19?

- Proactively protect the health and safety of our employees and communities
 - Do our part in preventing further spread of the virus
 - Enable employees to balance work-life priorities during this time
 - Continue to meet our organizational needs

Tips for Employees

Maintaining performance

Reflect on one key question: What do I need to do to carry out my work while working remotely?

Be creative and suggest tactics to your supervisor about how you can carry out your work in different ways.

Set goals and proactively communicate results to your supervisor.

Create to-do lists to stay on track and minimize distractions.

Self-management

- Get ready for the day
- Working remotely might mean that you will work with less supervision. Be mindful about managing your work and time to deliver the same results.
- Schedule a break every day to prevent isolation and feelings of cabin fever (e.g. go for a walk).
- When working from home or other locations, set up your space to minimize distractions and enable you to focus. Make sure you have a specific room or surface for work (i.e. a bed is not an appropriate workspace).
- Despite having less supervision from time to time, it is critical that you ask for support from your supervisor when you need it.

Maintaining Communication

It's easy to take working relationships for granted. Be proactive about communication to build trust and strong working relationships:

- Conduct regular check-ins with your supervisor and teammates to talk about both work and life.
- Agree on a work schedule with your manager to meet core hour requirements while also managing work-life balance.
- Use available technology to make interactions as human as possible.
- Avoid an “always on” habit by creating boundaries around when teammates can contact you – let them know when you are available.
